

Poor Ould Goat plays Irish folk/rock, bluegrass, country, rock, Americana and original songs with high energy on acoustic instruments. The four members play a pile of instruments, collectively including mandolin, accordion, guitar, djembe, bouzouki, banjo, bodhran, doumbek, tin whistle, drum kit, and three vocals. Setlists include Irish classics; popular rock, country and bluegrass; jigs and reels; and more. The shows include great music, sing-alongs, humor (disclaimer: our humor is never guaranteed to actually be humorous...), song requests, requests to leave and revelry.

Poor Ould Goat is:

Joe Bacon - banjo, whistles, guitar, vocals

Chris McGonnell - guitar, bodhran, vocals

Brian Carney - mandolin, bouzouki, vocals

Jeff Jankowski - djembe, doumbek, drum kit

The band has been together for 8 years and has played pubs, events and festivals from Buffalo to Baltimore. The band has released one 16 song CD entitled "Good Night Bad Morning" and has always had more fun together than any working band should. Fueled by copious amounts of Guinness in their early days as a band, Poor Ould Goat is now fueled by the love of playing music together, the adoration of their fans and "less" copious amounts of Guinness ;)
